DEDICATION

This Year Book is dedicated with grateful appreciation to those who by their financial assistance, counsel, and support have made possible the Southern Police Institute.

The City of Louisville
The Carnegie Corporation of New York
General Education Board
The Doris Duke Foundation
University of Louisville

The Year Book is designed to offer a word-picture study of the Southern Police Institute during its first year and one-half of operation.

HISTORY

The Southern Police Institute was established to meet a growing need for higher training for police officers, especially those in commanding and supervisory ranks. Established at the University of Louisville in the fall of 1950, it soon assembled a staff consisting of David A. McCandless, Director; Rolland L. Soule, Assistant Director; and Dorothy P. Clore, Secretary-Office Manager. The staff spent the time prior to the January opening of the Institute in preparing: (1) a comprehensive curriculum; (2) a list of visiting lecturers and subjects to be assigned to each; and (3) an hourly schedule for the twelve-weeks' term.

In November of 1950, the Director and Colonel Carl E. Heustis, Chief of Police of Louisville, made a trip through the South for the purpose of acquainting officials in the larger cities with the aims and objectives of the Institute.

The Institute opened its first term on January 3, 1951. Impressive ceremonies, with addresses by the Acting President of the University, representatives of the City of Louisville, and the President of the Louisville Chamber of Commerce, were followed by a reception in the classroom, with prominent laymen and officials of the city and state as guests. In the afternoon registration was held and there enrolled 23 officers from 7 southern states.

In the year and one-half since the opening of the Institute five terms have been held, and 113 officers from 18 states have graduated and received certificates.

Chiefs Jenkins, Atlanta; Heustis, Louisville, discuss new plans with Director.

SOUTHERN POLICE INSTITUTE BUILDING

The Southern Police Institute building is located near the Eastern Parkway entrance to Belknap Campus, University of Louisville. Here on the second floor of its two-story brick building are the staff offices, storage room, and air-conditioned classroom. Experiments and demonstrations are conducted in Arts and Science buildings at the University. The Institute, however, expects shortly to have its own laboratory.

Neither effort nor expense was spared in making the classroom comfortable and attractive. It is rather unique in its beauty of design combined with the latest facilities for visual aid instruction. It features walls of weld-tex paneling, acoustical tile ceiling and rubber tile flooring. Thirty upholstered, tablet-arm chairs are arranged in four semi-circular rows facing a ten-inch high platform, behind which is a recessed blackboard with four sliding panels for class use. The windows are provided with venetian blinds and conservative drapes. Between the windows are built-in book cases, and around the walls in the rear of the room are divans and chairs for visiting observers.

COMMENTS BY FOUR WELL-KNOWN AUTHORITIES IN CRIMINOLOGY.

There is no better indication of the concrete and practical value of the course of training offered by the Southern

Police Institute than the comments of such nationally known authorities in the field of criminology as are quoted below.

August Vollmer, Professor, author, criminologist, former president I.A.C.P.

I have read and studied your curriculum very critically and have no hesitancy in saying that it is one of the best that has come to my attention. My congratulations go to the persons who contributed so magnificently to this worthy project.

August Vollmer
(Author, Criminologist, and Past President of International Association of Chiefs of Police)

Joseph D. Lohman, Chairman Illinois Division of Correction.

Having just completed my third trip to the Southern Police Institute, I can not refrain from expressing my great satisfaction with the program you have developed. I think your curriculum is the best rounded twelve-week intensive course in police training yet developed in this country. The fact that you have been able to bring in so many authoritative leaders in their respective fields has given added stature to the program's academic content.

Joseph D. Lohman
(Chairman, Illinois Division of Correction)

Andrew J. Kavanaugh, Supt. Public Safety, Wilmington, Del., former president I.A.C.P.

There is no doubt that there is a very great need for police training all along the line but, especially, for police officials and executives. The work demanded of administrative officials today requires greater knowledge, skill and diplomacy than ever before. The Southern Police Institute provides the teaching staff and training facilities to meet this need of law enforcement. The course of training, not only covers the up-to-date police methods and techniques, but also brings police officials and administrators up to a professional level.

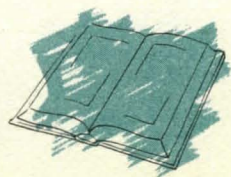

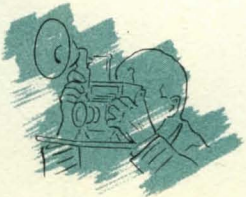

Andrew J. Kavanaugh
(Superintendent of Public Safety, Wilmington, Delaware
Past President of International Association of Chiefs of Police)

Fred E. Inbau, Professor of Law, Northwestern University.

The Southern Police Institute is making a far-reaching contribution to the cause of better law enforcement and good government as well. Its course of instruction is well planned and very effectively administered.

Fred E. Inbau
(Professor of Law, Northwestern University)

INSTRUCTION

The Southern Police Institute has a full-time instructor, Rolland L. Soule, who is also Assistant Director. In addition, approximately fifty visiting lecturers and technicians, who have been selected because of their particular qualifications in the fields of Criminology and Police Science, instruct at the Institute each term. The instruction is directed along practical lines and includes the latest methods in crime detection and, equally important, crime prevention. Among those who have lectured at the Institute are:

METHODS OF INSTRUCTION

LECTURES

Instruction is given through the medium of lectures, demonstrations, field trips, visual aids, simulated incidents, mock crime scenes, and class room discussions. Students are encouraged to exchange ideas among themselves and during the term are given opportunities for leadership. The training ideal is emphasized, with the hope that graduating students will return to their cities imbued with the spirit of furthering training programs in their own departments.

ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

Jumping the gun on their graduation, student officers of the first class organized an Alumni Association during their last week in school. Articles of Incorporation were drawn, by-laws were prepared, and The Southern Police Institute Alumni Association was formally incorporated under the laws of the State of Kentucky. The objects and aims of the Association are described in the Articles as follows: (1) To help, aid, and assist the Southern Police Institute, University of Louisville, Louisville, Kentucky, in carrying on its police educational program. (2) To promote, provide for or, assist in the establishment of further educational programs through institutes, meetings, or otherwise. (3) To help, aid, and assist in the promotion of programs for the elevation of police standards and increasing public confidence in and support of law enforcement.

Plans were made for the publication bi-monthly of a bulletin which would contain news of the graduates, as well as reprints of articles of particular interest to policemen. Plans also were formulated for a biennial convention of the Association in cities throughout the southern region.

The pictures shown below are the officers selected to serve for the years 1951-1952.

"FROM THE CHIEFS AND ADMINISTRATORS"

"...I know of no other training available which fits the needs of the southern municipal police departments as the training offered by the Southern Police (Training) Institute. Lack of proper training facilities has always been a glaring defect in police organizations in the South. I am convinced that a graduate of this school can return to his department and render a valuable service in the training of officers unable to obtain training from other sources. I would advise every southern police department to take full advantage of training facilities offered by the Southern Police Training Institute at the very first opportunity."

Fred C. Parker, Jr.
Baton Rouge, La.

"I take this opportunity to express to you my sincere appreciation for the splendid work you are now doing at the University of Louisville on behalf of law enforcement throughout the southern states. To me it is a deep feeling of pride and satisfaction to know that in the City of Louisville we have one of the finest schools in the nation for the training of law enforcement officers, a profession that has been sadly neglected down through the years."

J. C. Garrett
Danville, Va.

"...our police department as a whole has benefitted much from our (S.P.I. graduates') experiences. In my opinion the Southern Police Institute is a wonderful opportunity for any police officer who wishes to advance himself in this line of work."

J. I. Nichols
Rocky Mount, N. C.

"In this day of skilled and professional criminals it is of the greatest importance that we have our law enforcement officers more skilled and much better trained than ever before. The Southern Police Institute is doing a great job in the training of officers in proficient law enforcement. I am looking forward as down through the years we have more and more graduates of the Institute on our force. Let me say in closing that yours is an Institute that law enforcement agencies everywhere have every reason to be very proud of."

L. J. Campbell
Columbia, S. C.

"The purpose of this letter is to commend... the Southern Police Institute for the fine work that (it is) doing in advanced training for those entrusted with law enforcement throughout the South. It is the studied and considered opinion of the writer that there is a "crying need" all over the country for instruction such as the Southern Police Institute is giving. Having had a member of this department... recently attend your Institute and having reviewed the work he did there, I cannot recommend too highly the work that your Institute is accomplishing."

F. N. Littlejohn
Charlotte, N. C.

"I am writing this letter to advise you of our opinion of the very excellent service rendered by the Southern Police Institute and the important function that it performs in the United States, with particular emphasis on this vicinity and in the South. The rapid expansion of our Department has made us conversant with the need for well-trained administrators who are familiar with modern police techniques. The Southern Police Institute offers the South an opportunity to accelerate this developing process at a relatively small cost to the departments availing themselves of this training because of the excellent scholarship program and the intensive curriculum."

Guthrie Crowe, Commissioner
Kentucky State Police

"May I take this opportunity to express my sincere appreciation for the fine work you and all persons connected with the Southern Police Institute are doing toward betterment of police departments who participate in enrollment of officers through your Institute. From the knowledge acquired through your school by (our) men, we are contemplating a training school for our department in the near future for recruits and in-service members of this department."

H. A. Master
South Charleston, W. Va.

"The need for advanced police training among law enforcement officers, in the southern region, has long been recognized among leaders in law enforcement. It was most gratifying to learn, December, 1950, that you had taken the lead and had organized the Southern Police Institute. Please accept my appreciation for the splendid job you are doing at the Institute and for having seen fit to accept officers from my department. It is my sincere belief that there is a great future for the Southern Police Institute."

T. E. McClung
LaGrange, Ga.

"I am convinced that the greatest need in American Police Departments today is additional training. I wish to commend you and the City of Louisville for the fine progress you are making at the Southern Police Institute. I was especially pleased with the training that two members of this department received at the Institute last year. I wish for you and the Institute all the success possible in your efforts to strengthen law enforcement in the South-east."

H. T. Jenkins
Atlanta, Ga.

"The City of Lexington officials join me in endorsing the Southern Police Institute as a valuable asset to the southern region of the United States. It has long been needed to train men in this region and to advance the profession of policing. I strongly recommend that all law enforcement agencies send members of their organizations to a session of the Southern Police Institute and join with others in attaining the aims set forth by that Institute."

Dudley McCloy
Lexington, Ky.

"The Southern Police Institute, in my opinion, is presently doing more to raise the level of law enforcement efficiency, particularly for the smaller towns, than any other program that has yet been set up. I have personally had three officers to date trained at the Southern Police Institute and have had the opportunity to observe their work both before and after the training program. These men feel the necessity, once they have been trained in modern law enforcement practices, to continue their training as well as to strive constantly for improvements in the department."

Hill R. Healan, City Mgr.
Meridian, Mississippi

"I feel that the highest praise must be given to the Institute and its founders for the services it is rendering to the south-eastern states by furnishing instructors who are recognized specialists in their subjects. From the results shown thus far, I strongly urge that all law enforcement agencies avail themselves of the opportunities offered by the Institute. This department is proud of the honor of having its third member attend the Institute and will endeavor to support by attendance of future classes if accepted."

George T. McClamma,
Clearwater, Florida

"The Southern Police Institute offers a fine opportunity to law enforcement officers. The training afforded by schools such as the Southern Police Institute has developed a marked increase of respect for law enforcement both by the public and the officers."

Dear Mr. McCandless:

I am writing you to advise you that the Southern Police Institute is doing a very fine job in the training of officers in proficient law enforcement. I am looking forward as down through the years we have more and more graduates of the Institute on our force. Let me say in closing that yours is an Institute that law enforcement agencies everywhere have every reason to be very proud of.

Sincerely,

RECOGNITION

OF THE SOUTH'S NEW POLICE INSTITUTE

Since the Institute first opened a little over a year ago, the appearance of complimentary articles published in authoritative papers in the law enforcement field has been most gratifying. We are certain it reflects the satisfaction of a basic need, not only in the South, but in the country as a whole, for an instructive and educational center for coping with the increasingly complex law enforcement problems of our modern society.

FROM THE GRADUATES

When I send clippings to tell you of my promotion, I am only in a measure showing you the assistance the Southern Police Institute has been in my progress. The session I spent there has helped me no end. . . The parts of the course, such as Personnel Management, I thought I would never use have become one of my major tasks. The wide range of subjects covered in the school enables me to plan for our schools. . .

Captain Paul B. Calhoun
Director of Training
Greensboro, North Carolina

My superiors were impressed with the material which I brought back and I am attempting to pass on in our In-Service Training Program and our Auxiliary Police School a small measure of that which the Institute gave me.

Shift Sergeant R. C. Arnett
Oak Ridge, Tennessee

The Southern Police Institute is, in my opinion, unexcelled in its efforts to professionalize the policeman's role in public service. It is pioneering expanded education in the field of policing.

Sergeant Frank Daniels
Clearwater, Florida

Much of the material used in my lectures before our In-Service training classes comes from my notebook. I am indebted to Dr. Ayers too for his tutoring which makes it possible for me to appear before a class and say something.

Captain Frank H. Gravitt
Lexington, Kentucky

. . . the Southern Police Institute will be responsible for all the success which comes to me. It is a great school and any man who neglects his job while attending is fooling no one but himself. If he falls down on the job I feel sorry for him when the time comes for advancement and other jobs which would make life easier for him.

Lieutenant J. J. Joyce
Midland, Texas

Today more and more we are realizing that policing is a profession and should share the same high standards of public service as medicine, law, and education. To teach this there is a great need today for training schools for police. . . I believe that the training here at the Southern Police Institute is the best that can be offered anywhere. . . I am proud to have been a student here, and hope that I can put my training to work for the betterment of my department and all mankind.

Officer E. G. Fredrickson
Illinois State Police

Most outstanding police school in the nation today. Curriculum covers all phases of the police service.

Officer John L. Keefe
Columbia, South Carolina

I think the Southern Police Institute is a very well founded school, staffed by a very competent group of people. The school will (depending on the student) contribute to the efficiency of any officer. . . Although the school is fairly new it rates along the top with Northwestern and the National Police Academy.

Captain Andrew Kristofek
Bristol, Virginia

The Southern Police Institute presents a wonderful opportunity for the police in the southern states to understand mutual problems.

Harry S. Leach, Training Specialist
Texas Department of Public Safety

I made a detailed report to my commanders concerning the Institute. Mention should be made of the note books and their content, as each commander was amazed at the type of information therein. . . You may be assured of the endorsement and cooperation of this department at all times.

Captain Charles F. Middleton
Commandant of Training Division
Louisiana Department of Public Safety

I have finally gotten settled down to the work I was sent to Louisville to learn. . . School started for 39 new police officers one week ago and will continue through March 19. I am putting to use many of the things that I learned while attending Southern Police Institute. I feel that my time there was well spent.

Sergeant J. V. Rawlings
Birmingham, Alabama

If every law enforcement officer could be exposed to the benefits that the Southern Police Institute gives in the way of improving the technique of enforcing our laws, there would be an inestimable amount of good done in the way of a better understanding between the officer and the citizen.

Officer A. L. Truitt
Griffin, Georgia

I have found the subjects taught to be varied and well-chosen. In my opinion a student at the Institute has to retain only a portion of the valuable subjects taught to make him a 100% improved policeman. . . Having done so has increased my knowledge in modern police techniques and will enable me to prosecute the work of my chosen profession with utmost faith and determination.

C. C. Waddell, Chief of Police
Asheville, North Carolina

Words cannot express how deeply I am grateful to you and the "crew" up there for so many things that have enabled me to follow my line of endeavor as a policeman more conscientiously and accurately. I owe you and the Southern Police Institute more than I can ever repay for such wonderful coaching and educational background. It has broadened my intellect and ability as a police officer. There comes a time in everyone's life when one runs out of adequate words to express one's proper sentiments and this is it as far as I am concerned.

Sergeant O. L. Wilkerson
Raleigh, North Carolina

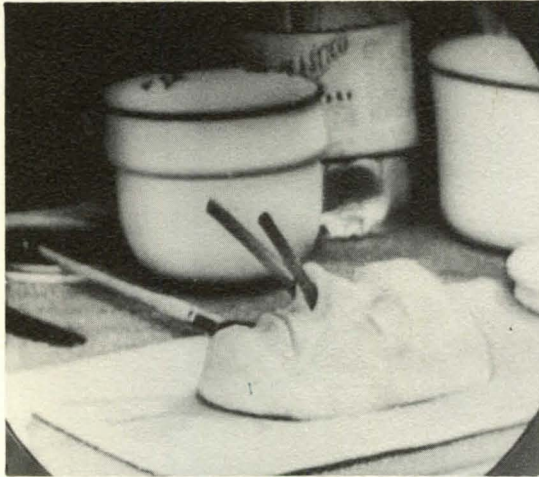

I want you to know that I enjoyed every minute of the time I was at the Institute, and the longer I go the more I appreciate the fine work being done there. At the time I was attending classes, there were a few lectures I felt like I could do without, but now it is a different picture. Now I feel that I got some good out of all of the different lecturers.

Sergeant Jesse G. Workman
Charleston, West Virginia
